3.2.1 (QIM): Institution has created an ecosystem for innovations and has initiatives for creation and transfer of knowledge.

The VADP's Arts, Science, and Commerce College is situated in a rural area. The college is dedicated to providing the information, innovations, and scientific answers to persistent challenges that the rural and underprivileged segments of society require. By cultivating talents devoted to research, the institutional ecosystem fosters the development of creative and novel concepts. In consideration of this, the college established the "Academic Research Committee (ARC)" and used facilities to preserve a research atmosphere. The required resources have been managed by ARC. The Innovation, Incubation, and Start-up Cell encourage scholars to develop their concepts into technological solutions. We publish a few research articles in peer-reviewed and UGC Care journals because the college provides a research environment for both staff and students. Students are encouraged to create unique projects through their innovative ideas and areas of interest in study by the Avishkar Competition. Students participate in Avishkar competitions conducted each year by SPPU, Pune. Students also participate in competitions regarding innovation, like Innofest, conducted by other colleges.

Projects based on research are given to students to assist in identifying their research interests, promote an environment that fosters scientific temper, and offer direction in the interpretation and evaluation of data. Faculty and pupils are also provided with opportunities for hands-on training in order to assist them in developing their abilities and trustworthiness. Workshops on innovation, research methods, "Strategy to write and publish research papers," and intellectual property rights are organized by the college.
